Integrity

Gillanders has taken on the challenge of addressing environmental considerations at every stage of our business model. Beginning in the office and continuing to our job sites, we are committed to minimizing our environmental footprint by making energy conscious decisions and properly addressing the concerns of both our employees and clients alike. We are always working toward the creation of a more "green" business model which includes the implementation of programs such as LEED on our job sites.

Value

Gillanders' commitment to the environment is second to none. We strive to point out steps that can be taken on all projects to minimize the environmental footprint of any given reconstruction. As we work with proven guidelines such as those outlined through LEED our efforts consistently meet and exceed the expectations of our clients.

Service

Recently, Gillanders has worked on several LEED projects. We worked closely with the consulting engineers to ensure that all of our employees were working within the set guidelines and were encouraged to learn from the expertise of the personnel on board.

As our clients' needs evolve, we will continue to pursue the knowledge needed to fulfill those requirements. With three certified LEED APs on staff, Gillanders is ready to guide our clients along the path to a more sustainable future.
